

Earl's Diary - Thursday - September 19, 2013

Dear Loyal Readers, One and All;

I took the opportunity this morning to rest and relax before the “settlers” arrived with their “covered wagons”. That lasted until 10:00 when the first one arrived. That was easy. Wolf and Martha have a 12.5 Little Joe Trailer. It fits anywhere!

More arrivals appeared, usually one at a time, throughout the day. By 5:00 almost everyone was in. The last one arrived at 9:30. (They are w o r k i n g people, so left right after (xxxxxx, you know, that W word). We retired people understand all about that!

So far there are 21 trailers here today. The last one will arrive tomorrow. We have all shapes and sizes to look at.

We have no planned activities for today, so most people will do their own thing. (I have a feeling that most will be sitting around making new friends, OR greeting old friends.) Please don't get me wrong, I don't use that word “OLD” loosely!

These are just a sampling of the “wagons” that have arrived today. Tomorrow I will get out for more pictures. So, until tomorrow, thanks for coming along with me. Bye for now - - Earl
