

Earl's Diary - Sunday - September 22, 2013

Today is the last official day of the Nor Cal Roundup. The weather was bright with a few clouds floating by in the sky. It was a little cool, so shirt sleeves and jackets were in order. The last event of the weekend was the potluck brunch. We had lots of goodies to partake of. One of our friendly cooks was preparing french toast for our culinary pleasure.

More food????????

Seven of our friends departed for home right after breakfast. That left 14 “wagons” still on the ranch. This was a relaxing day for all involved. Several couples went for a hike on the nearby Pacific Coast Trail. Another couple spent the day exploring Mount Lassen National Park. They reported that the Lassen park road was closed briefly today because of snow. There was 2 or 3 inches on the ground, but snow it was! In another day or two it will probably be gone.

Two couples even went into Burney to try their hands (and feet) at the local bowling alley. Others stayed in camp to visit. Still others visited the community of Cassel to view those amazing junque sculptures that I reported on in Diary page for September 18. Everyone that viewed them were surprised and pleased at what they saw. That spot proved to be quite a popular sightseeing stop as the word spread “You have to see this!”

So, that's the happenings at the 2013 fifth annual Nor Cal Roundup. By tomorrow morning everyone will be heading for home - including me. It has been most fun. Thanks for coming along with me all my loyal readers. I have some photo plans for the trip home tomorrow.
